"How to Draft a Bad Contract is 'Simply Brilliant.'" – Steven Pinker, Harvard University

"I can't say enough about the presenter. He was the best I've heard yet!" – Webinar Attendee

Mark has presented courses for organizations including the Colorado Bar Association, the Nebraska State Bar Association, the Colorado Municipal League, Lorman Business Seminars, MESA CLE, Strafford Publications, LawPracticeCLE, Lawline, Rossdale CLE, and the Center for American Studies. He serves on the Commercial Contracts Editorial Advisory Board for Strafford Publications. Mark served as a military law analyst for MSNBC, and appeared on the Today Show and the Jimmy Kimmel show. Mark successfully competed in humorous speech contests at a high level for twelve years. A former chairperson of the Advisory Board of The Colorado Lawyer magazine, Mark has written numerous legal and non-legal articles.

Mark's popular CLE presentations include:

- How to Draft a Bad Contract. Mark created this entertaining program based on his article, How to Draft a Bad Contract. Drawing on nearly forty years of litigation experience, Mark helps attendees understand what not to do and why they should not do it. Course materials include numerous boilerplate clauses in plain English. Mark can tailor the length of his presentations to suit your organization's needs.
- A Brief History of Piercing the Corporate Veil. Mark first became interested in this topic as a collections lawyer for a Fortune 500 company. He wrote the seminal Proof of Facts article on this topic (45 POF3d 1) and co-authored an article on it for Causes of Action. He has litigated many corporate veil cases and given numerous presentations on this topic. This entire area of law is, as Justice Cardozo once wrote, "Enveloped in the mists of metaphor." Mark will help lawyers understand the origins of the myth that piercing the corporate veil is nearly impossible, and help them view the topic in a new way.
- Plain English for Lawyers. There is no reason for lawyers to employ the archaic writing style popular in England three hundred years ago. Plain English is writing that is clear, concise, and readily understood by the target audience. Plain English lowers costs, improves productivity, increases credibility, and reduces misunderstandings. A fierce advocate for plain English, Mark teaches attendees the benefits of plain English with practical examples, and offers tips on how to rid their writing from the scourge of Legalese forever. Mark can also present a similar program for non-lawyers called PlainEnglish for Business.

- Litigating Like the Viet Cong: Litigating Against an Opponent with Vastly Superior Resources. The Vietnam War saw the United States – the world’s mightiest military power – attempt to prevent communists from taking South Vietnam. Many battles pitted the U.S. – the world’s most powerful nation – against the Viet Cong. The U.S. lost the war. Like war, litigation involves conflict. What can the Viet Cong teach us about litigating against an opponent with vastly superior resources? In this presentation, Mark (a former Air Force lawyer) draws on his study of armed conflict and his 39 years of practicing law to teach lawyers how to litigate against large firms and better funded opponents.
- To Be or Not to Be: Improving Writing by Using E-Prime \(Click for article\). Would you like to clarify your thinking? Construct more persuasive arguments? Improve your writing? Reduce misunderstandings? You can. Just avoid using the verb to be. To be creates problems because we tend to use it like an equal sign. We say, “The cat is white.” But cat and white are two different concepts. Cat denotes an animal. White denotes a color. If we can’t use is, we must instead say something like, “The cat has white fur”—a more accurate statement. E-Prime is a form of English that avoids the verb to be. In this presentation, Mark helps attendees see language in a new way -- a way that will improve their writing and clarity of thought.
- Solo Practice for Fun and Profit. With 39 years of legal experience, mostly as a sole practitioner, Mark has learned many lessons, sometimes the hard way. In this amusing presentation, Mark shares what he has learned and offers practical tips on how to enjoy and profit from your practice. Courses materials include forms.

Mark's other presentations include:

- How to Buy or Sell a Horse
- Helping Realtors Avoid Lawsuits
- Preventive Law
- Helping Home Inspectors Avoid Lawsuits
- Helping Small Businesses Avoid Lawsuits
- Fight Back: Practical Self-Defense

Mark can customize any program for your audience and create other programs of interest to your organization's members. He can also organize panels for presentations on these and other topics.

If you want to speak with Mark about the possibility of having him present to your organization, call him at (303) 638- 3410 or email him at mark @cohenslaw.com.

About Mark

Mark has 39 years of legal experience. He earned a B.A.in Economics at Whitman College and earned his law degree at the University of Colorado in Boulder. He earned an LL.M. in Agricultural and Food Law from the University of Arkansas, where he also taught advanced legal writing courses.

Mark’s diverse legal career includes service as an Air Force JAG, a Special Assistant U.S. Attorney, a prosecutor, a municipal judge for Boulder, six years on the Advisory Board of The Colorado Lawyer (including one as chairperson), and service on the Executive Board of the Colorado Municipal League.

Mark wrote six articles in the Am.Jur. Proof of Facts series, including the seminal article on piercing the corporate veil. He has written numerous articles and book reviews for The Colorado Lawyer. In 2004, he won 2nd prize in the SEAK National Legal Fiction Writing Competition. His satirical article, How to Draft a Bad Contract, was reprinted in the Scribes Journal of Legal Writing and the Michigan Bar Journal. His mysteries, The Fractal Murders and Bluetick Revenge, were published by a subsidiary of Time-Warner. The Fractal Murders was a Book Sense Top Ten mystery pick.

Mark completed graduate courses in symbolic logic and is a member of the Institute of General Semantics and the Mystery Writers of America. He writes a regular column for the Nederland Mountain-Ear, and received an award from the Colorado Press Association.

Mark’s practice focuses on drafting and reviewing legal documents, and litigating disputes arising out of poorly drafted documents. He enjoys helping organizations and lawyers improve their legal and non-legal documents.

Mark holds a black belt in karate and serves on the board of directors of DART, Inc., a Boulder non-profit that offers training in personal safety, violence prevention, and appropriate dating relationships. In 2022, Colorado Governor Jared Polis appointed Mark to the Colorado Combative Sports Commission – formerly the Colorado Boxing Commission.
